Overview

Derek Mountford is a litigator and problem solver who handles a broad range of commercial matters in Florida and, when needed, across the country. His practice focuses on complex, bet-the-company cases that often involve breaches of contract, corporate governance disputes, or alleged antitrust violations.

Derek represents clients in a variety of industries, including transportation, logistics, healthcare, commercial real estate, and technology. He also represents financial institutions in matters concerning all aspects of their business, including those arising under the Uniform Commercial Code, fraud, and consumer finance laws.

Prior to joining Gunster, Derek spent time at national law firms and served as a judicial law clerk for two U.S. District Judges in Jacksonville, Florida. These experiences broadened his perspective and enhanced his advocacy skills. The lessons learned along the way provide a unique lens through which Derek assesses cases.

Outside the office, Derek is an active member in the community. He serves as an officer on nonprofit boards, participates in professional and leadership organizations, and has organized community service events to improve the lives of those in need.
