Overview

Logan T. Wiggins is a litigation project manager with over a decade of experience in large-scale commercial litigation, class action, internal investigation, government investigation, and arbitration. He supports case teams in both federal and state matters, as well as coordinated proceedings across the country. In overseeing the identification, preservation, collection, review, and production of data, Logan strives to pragmatically manage the many components involved in electronic discovery, thereby creating scale through efficiency and repeatability. Throughout the litigation process, he also places emphasis on making sure the client's needs remain front and center at all times.

Prior to joining Gunster, Logan worked as a litigation paralegal at a global law firm located in Chicago, IL, handling MDLs and class actions, where he supported large case teams, managed case files, and collaborated with professionals on various matters in substantial trials and hearings throughout the United States.
