Overview

Nataša Glišić strives to deliver efficient solutions and guide her clients through the legal issues businesses encounter. Using her experience and laser-sharp focus, Nataša helps her clients shape and implement successful strategies geared toward reaching their goals. Prior to joining Gunster, Nataša gained valuable experience as a litigator at a full-service national litigation firm, providing her a broad understanding of the judicial system, and insight into business considerations from budgeting to risk assessment.

Nataša was born in Bosnia and Herzegovina and is fluent in Serbian, Bosnian and Serbo-Croatian. While living in the United States, she became fluent in conversational Spanish. Nataša's background amplifies and diversifies her practical perspective on life and pragmatic approach to law, critical components of a successful business lawyer.

At Barry University's Dwayne O. Andreas School of Law, Nataša graduated first in her class and served as a senior editor of the Barry Law Review. While juggling classes and work, she also completed a judicial externship with Judge Jay P. Cohen at the Fifth District Court of Appeal. Her experience as an extern allowed Nataša to enhance her writing skills and develop a meticulous attention to detail.

Outside of practicing law, Nataša enjoys spending time with her family and traveling. Her background and family values instilled the importance of giving back to the community. Nataša volunteered at Feeding Northeast Florida and provided pro bono work for elderly clients with estate planning needs. For the past three years, Nataša served on the Jacksonville Women Lawyers Association Judicial Reception Committee, where she showcased her organizational skills and collaborated with leaders of our legal community on important local issues.
